Maurice has been engaged by Hotel Ambassador to teach Marie new dance steps. Eleonora Ambrose, his wife, will teach Princess Ileana.

HAT FOR A QUEEN

Miss Marion Harris will present this specially designed hat to Marie at City Hall. It is violet in color, trimmed with ostrich plumes.

NEW YORK GREET'S MARIE WITH REGAL POMP

Twenty-one guns saluted before the greater tumult of the cheering throngs who waited in the driveway to greet her.

As the royal party, preceded by a military and police escort and a huge band, made its way up to the Broadway canyon from the Battery to City Hall the usual New York welcome was given.

From countless windows high in the skyscrapers thousands of ribbons of ticker tape, giving a Mardi Gras atmosphere to the ceremony, streamed down to the street, sweeping over the promenade and the royal car. The rain caused as the parade moved on.

GRANES AT SKYSCRAPERS.

Queen Marie was in an open automobile, and seated her back to the city, looking toward the Battery.

"I enjoy being in style, but I don't expect a fabulous sum on clothes," the Queen replied.

"I am not an official person," she continued, pointing out that her visit here is of a private nature.

"My government expects me to follow my own line, namely good will and charity to all."

The Queen was garbed in a charming gown of Burgundy crepe de chene, made in one piece and hanging six inches below her knees.

The gown was trimmed with velvet and had a black fox collar and cuffs. She wore lizard skin shoes and beige stockings and a small circle of gold hat. Two ropes of pearls were about her throat and she wore large pearl earrings.

"Would you be willing to follow Princess Ileana and Prince Nicholas marry Americans?" she was asked.

"They are still young," the Queen laughed.

"How many lunchless cakes did you eat during the trip?" she was asked.

"Only one at a time," Queen Marie answered with a smile.

"What is the Rumanian attitude toward Jews?" she was asked by a Jewish newspaperman.

"We treat them like anyone else. I shall be pleased to see the Jews of America."

"Do you like American cooking?" was the next question, and the Queen replied: "Oh, don't I!"

"In the report," she said, "that I was the only interview you will grant" she was asked.

"Which she replied: "I had to make some arrangements I can't be giving interviews all the time, can I?"

The Queen was asked, when she returns to Rumania, she would take with her son Prince Carol, and she replied: "I shall be glad to see the Jews of America."

How Queen Was Dressed on Arriving in U. S.

NEW YORK, Oct. 18.—Queen Marie of Rumania presented a charming appearance on her arrival in America today. She was dressed in a one-piece gown of Burgundy crepe de chene. The gown came six inches below the knees. It was trimmed with velvet, with black fox collar and cuffs.

The Queen wore lizard-skin shoes and beige stockings. Around her neck were two glistening ropes of pearls. A small gold-colored hat and a pair of large pearl earrings completed the costume which won her the additional title of "Queen of Fashions."

Walker as her escort, the Queen's party proceeded through lines of mounted policemen to the Battery, where she boarded the Washington train.

The Queen and her party descended to the tracks by a freight elevator to avoid the crush of curious onlookers gathered there to greet her. The Queen's party was met by a police, meeting her at the Battery, and she was escorted to the station.

HUB WOMAN TO GREET QUEEN

Mayor Nichols, after receiving the telegram stating that Queen Marie of Rumania would visit Boston at the conclusion of her Western trip.

Colored that he would appoint a hostess and a committee to prepare a welcome for her Majesty after he had received more definite details of the time of the visit.

"I cannot state anything definite as yet," he said, "because we do not know when or how long Her Majesty will be in Boston. When the plans are settled I will appoint a committee and a hostess to confer with me and discuss the entertainment of the royal visitor."

"Of course everything planned must be subject to the wishes of Queen Marie. I believe that every courtesy should be shown to the Queen and Boston will do that, but Queen Marie's personal wishes are paramount."

Mayor Nichols also stated that a Rumanian delegation would be called in at the conference of the committee to make plans for the entertainment of the royal visitor.

As a little girl she had a teacher of whom she was very fond—a poor little woman whose life had never been sweetened by good luck. Exploited by a greedy family, the teacher had been the master of two hard-working, working hard and receiving scant thanks.

She gave good lessons, and Roman enjoyed them. But aside from that the child became passionately interested in the culture of the unlovely little woman who had never had anyone to love or help her—who was the "sacrificed" one of this world.

Roman conceived the idea that if the little woman could have a room, good food, fresh air and some brightening out into happiness. So she proposed that I let her spend her summers in our country house which I gladly did.

My daughter's next move was to make the acquaintance of the little teacher's relations—nephews, nieces, cousins, uncles and godchildren of all sorts and conditions. They and their affairs became her personal interests, and the poor little teacher experienced something she had that she was not a solitary figure in a world of hard work and arduous appreciation.

The Queen, joined in the general laughter, and pointing her finger at her son said, "I hope you stick to that."

"I didn't come here for girls," he replied.

Princess "Nurses" Her Teacher Two Years

On Board the S. S. Leviathan, Oct. 18.—I have been told that Americans like to hear personal episodes out of our daily lives. Our Ileana has "the human touch."

All with whom she comes in contact interest her—her servants, her teaching masters and mistresses, her friends, each casual acquaintance, even the man in the street. For all of these she desires to put herself and her resources into it.

Princess Spells So Badly She Can't Help Write Book

New York, Oct. 18 (A.P.).—The royal children have had a time of it, and sometimes come out of the struggle no better, in the classroom, than other children, was revealed by Queen Marie of Rumania today.

"Do you intend to write your memoirs of this trip at some future date?" the Queen was asked on reaching the United States. She replied: "I hope so, but I don't know if I will ever get time."

"Perhaps the Princess Ileana might help you," it was suggested.

"I'm afraid not," Marie smiled, glancing at her daughter, "she spells so badly."

BOSTON WOULD ADD TO ITS ANIMALS

There is room at Franklin Park zoo for more buffalo and Boston should be glad to get some of these animals, especially if by doing so the city can help save the proposed slaughter of the herd of 300 tame buffalo in Utah, according to Daniel J. Harkins, curator of the zoo here. Buck Corrier Harkins and Dr. W. A. Young of the Animal Rescue League today denounced the scheduled hunting of the Utah herd next month, a slaughter due to take place on an island and in the name of "sport."

"We have six buffalo quartered at Franklin Park and a visit to see them would quickly convince any fair-minded man, woman, or child that it would be shameful to kill off so many of the last remnants of a once mighty herd of purely American animals," said Harkins.

"Boston possibly would be glad to care for some of them if it were possible to get them to the zoo here. I am unalterably opposed to the slaughter," said Harkins.

THESE BISON LIVE IN PEACE
Buffalo in the Boston Zoo live in peace and plenty, while "sports" plan to butcher a whole herd of the few remaining bison in Utah. Why not send some of the others here?

DECLARES THAT KAISER TOOK NEWS CALMLY

By GRAND ADMIRAL ALFRED VON TIRPITZ

(From his own book, "The Story of the War.")

Conversation with Imperial Chancellor, January 27, 1918.

From the diary.

The Chancellor asked me to tell him my view regarding the submarine warfare. I said we could make Germany's position in England only by making England feel the war.

I explained my view in detail, because the Chancellor had previously said that he would not make about doubts on the issue of international law that might be raised against a U-boat war on merchant ships. He could get the assurance that such a war could be effectively carried out.

The Chancellor said he had grave misgivings with regard to the new trials, even with regard to the U-boat war, but he would not let this deter him.

COUNSEL QUARREL OVER MRS. HALL'S DEFENSE PLAN

(Special to the Boston Evening American.)
New Brunswick, N. J., Oct. 18.—A serious split has developed in the ranks of the opposing corps of lawyers retained to defend Mrs. Frances Stevens Hall and her three murder case co-defendants, it became known here today.

The quarrel is said to have grown out of Mrs. Hall's announced determination to take the witness stand and tell all she knows of the murder of her physician husband, the Rev. Edward Wheeler Hall, and his child's sister, Mr. Eusebio Mills, and the events leading up to it.

Judge Robert H. McCarter, former State attorney-general and the best known of the five defense lawyers, is known to oppose the widow's decision. He has warned that her course will let down the bars for the prosecution to ask all sorts of questions which would be kept from the record otherwise, and to conduct through the examination a sort of "fishing expedition."

On the other hand, Timothy N. Pendergast, who has been Mrs. Hall's lawyer and adviser from the outset, agrees with her that, inasmuch as she has nothing to conceal, she should show no hesitancy in taking the stand.

One thing that Mrs. Hall probably will be asked about will be a certain printed divorce opinion which is said to have found its way into her hands after it had been under consideration by Hall and Mrs. Mills. The opinion was attributed to a well-known New York clergyman and is said to have been retained partly to the question of divorce for retention. It is a theory of the prosecution that Dr. Hall was preparing to leave his wife.

THRICE SHE BALKS ARTIST BEAU IN SUICIDE

Alone in the world, his love castles crumbled about him, Frederick B. Pederson, young Danish artist living in Brain tree, meditated today on his troubles.

Three times the young artist bought poison and three times he got the bottle from him, she says, until finally he promised to live. As she told her story today, she covered her eyes and sobbed, and described her sweetheart's despair.

For weeks the sweethearts tried to plan some way out of their difficulties. Pederson has no friends in this country. It is hard to find work.

The plight of the young couple came to light when the girl disappeared. Her parents feared she had eloped, and notified the police. But she is at home today hoping her sweetheart will forget.

"Kid Boots" is Good Comedy

"Kid Boots" as a film hardly itself at this Metropolitan this week and introduces Eddie Cantor, Mr. Ziegfeld's banner clowning salesman, as a movie star.

After some few profitable seasons with a Broadway clientele, the gay comedian-critic now turns to the cinema to reach Main Street as well—and the richer rewards of a more direct-theatrical campaign.

That Main Street will be "reached," there can be but little doubt, for Eddie discloses a high order of low comedy that registers fully with an audience and the pleasant echoes resound in the box office.

The current film follows the classic once as nearly as it can be should. The opening scenes reveal the checkbook-bored hero up to his old tricks of acting as "come on" and general handy man for the proprietress of a cheap clothing store.

There follows then a rapid succession of gags and the bounding bushelman is whirled through a maze of trouble with torn trousers, false customers and what not. After that, the story runs wild and free through scenes of splendor and slapstick alike. Clara Bowman, Billie Dove and Lawrence Grant figure somehow in the proceedings, but it is mostly Eddie that makes "Kid Boots" as a film the "weir" it was in the stage.

The presentation at the "Met" is in the hands of a singing male chorus, the remarkably fine vocal group, especially in the baritone section, "Irma," a girl violinist, the usual short piece subjects, orchestra and even some of the pleasantly diversified and entertaining bill.

Lucretia Goddard Bush Makes Debut at Opera House This Evening

GIFTED AND CHARMING,

youngful in years and rich in the finest of training, Miss Lucretia Goddard Bush, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Sturgis Bush, makes her operatic debut this evening before a most friendly audience that promises to fill the Opera House.

AS THE LOVELY Marguerite of diabolical Faust, Miss Goddard commands her own dark tresses beneath the braided tresses braided in this particular case a wonderful wealth of gleaming gold, fashioned into a marvelous wig that took five whole months in the making.

LENDING FURTHER interest to her presentation of the unhappy Marguerite, Miss Goddard carries an old and unusual story. It was a gift to her, and it is made from the tale of Oliver from the Memoirs of Oliver, and once, in years ago, belonged to a Pope.

MISS GODDARD has spent the Summer and Autumn, preparing for this most momentous of occasions, by studying quietly in New England, only leaving for four weeks of teaching, the vocal conductor, Peveri, in New York.

NATURALLY the Opera House will hold this evening many lovely and admiring well-wishers of this youthful singer. And Mr. and Mrs. Bush will bring a family party, including Miss Louise Irvine and Miss Elizabeth Irving of New York, Henry Kenneth Bush, and Miss Jane Mathewson of Providence.

OTHERS having reservations are Mrs. Robert W. Bayles, Mr. and Mrs. George M. Cushing, Mrs. Hamilton Duff Lockwood, Mrs. Howard W. Paine, Mrs. Curtis Guild, Mr. and Mrs. Vittorio Orlandini and Miss Elizabeth St.

MEADAMES W. G. Scott, Mrs. D. W. B. Greene, Thomas R. Watson, Stephen V. R. Crosby, Frank Bourne, and others of the prominent have reservations for Faust when Miss Goddard begins her upward ascent of fame's ladder.

MISS SUSAN AMORY of Marlborough street, is in Gotham to greet the Princess Alexander Gaxaria when she comes ashore to meet from the steamship Fairy. There'll be greetings, too, for Mr. and Mrs. George Bramwell Baker of Chestnut Hill, home again after a Summer pilgrimage abroad.

PHILIP YOUNG and Mrs. Young of Boston, Mrs. Edward F. Kimball of Brookline and South Denbury, N. H., and Mr. and Mrs. all guests of the evening. Others are others of New England's quota returning on the Park.

"NO 46 BRACON STREET" is one of these days a live wherein political buzz of feminine persuasion buzz with utmost energy and accomplishment, what with Mrs. Charles Sumner Bird, able and handsome leader, to point out the way politically.

and tradition and with the Common spread before it.

RECENTLY for an informal luncheon at which she was chosen, Mrs. Bird wore an all white costume, gown of satin and wide chapeau of velours, its slender ribbons relieved by a dog collar rosette of pearls.

WHEN POLITICAL blarney gathered about as guests of the Republican Club members, the honored guests will be Mrs. Frederick H. Gillett of Washington and Boston, and Mrs. A. F. Fellingham of Boston, North Boston and Washington.

MRS. GILLETTE, mother of the two young matrons of former Vincent Club fame, Mrs. Reginald C. Foster (Frances Hunt) and Mrs. Christopher LaFarge (Louise Hunt), will find every moment of her stay filled with quiet hospitality.

U. S. Counselor Engaged

Crimson-Green Many Beauties in Stone Film

Followers of the Dartmouth and Harvard football eleven are looking forward with much interest to the football concert and dance at the Hotel Somerset Friday night the night before the annual football game between these two institutions.

The program includes the first appearance this season in Boston of the Dartmouth Musical Club which will give a short concert from 8:30 to 9:30, with Leo Robinson orchestra playing for dancing from then until 12, with specialty acts to be the musical club interspersed by them.

According to the advance sale of tickets liberal support is being given to the affair by the student body and younger alumni of both colleges. John L. Bryant, Frederick V. Field, Richard V. Flood and John H. Harvey compose the group.

Harvard men as before, while representing Dartmouth in the war capacity are Captain C. Hoar, Jr., Roy H. Dyer, Charles C. Stinson, Jr., J. Covert, Leslie J. Haylett and William C. Cusack.

GERMAN EXPERT FINDS U. S. PRISONS TOO SEVERE
Pittsburgh, Pa., Oct. 18 (A.P.)—Fulfillment of criticism rather than their representation is given to American prisoners of war by a German expert.

Dr. M. Liepmann, German expert, who had delegates attending the 56th annual Congress of the American Prison Association here, said "America today could learn a great deal from Germany in the treatment of prisoners of war."

He pointed out that in Germany the view of a prisoner, a cathedral and roses are included.

Martha Lee Talks To Housewives

QUINCE HONEY WINS APPLAUSE AT BEES AND TEAS

WHOLE GRAIN BREAD FOR KIDS

The use of whole grain bread is advocated by food scientists as the best for growing children. The whole grain wheat contains the mineral salts and elements which promote strength and vitality, as is proved by the splendid constitutions of the young people across the water, whose rations consist of whole grain bread from the bulk of the diet.

Housewives who are busy during the day sometimes slight the noon meal, because there is no one else to eat with them. For them whole grain bread and butter, a fruit, or a vegetable salad, together with a glass of milk is recommended as a simple, well balanced and delicious luncheon.

What is Baking Soda?

For three generations housewives throughout America have depended upon Baking Soda, either ARM & HAMMER BRAND or COW BRAND, as a necessity in the kitchen.

This old standby is equally useful all over the house and has great medicinal value.

Both of these well-known brands of Baking Soda are made by Church & Dwight Co., Inc., and both are the same—pure bicarbonate of soda of the highest grade—helpful as a digestive, a corrective for acid stomach, a relief for indigestion and dyspepsia—get a package today at your grocer's.

There's a HATCHET Food for every sort of taste—and every one a quality product.

FROM THE WATCHTOWER EARN'S PLACE IN EVERY PANTRY

Lamb is the leading best buy in the meat markets today. It is coming in in excellent condition and quality and the low price of former weeks still prevails. Pork and veal prices have declined a little.

Native celery, cauliflower and peppers are the outstanding features among vegetables, for they are among the most reasonable. The celery is very good and sells at an attractive price around 15 cents or 20 cents a bunch. Cauliflower is lower than usual, with some excellent heads at 25 cents. Peppers average 15 cents a pound, and they are the blooming beauties at that, still traveling in higher levels. They average about 60 cents a peck now, but are expected to be about 75 cents next week.

The season for peaches is nearly over, and those which are still with us, are of rather poor quality. Peas are appearing in full force, the Burro Blue at about 50 cents a bushel. Apples, Damson plums and Concord grapes are in their prime the best days of picking and preserving.

Breakfast Dishes For Little Tots

The Philadelphia Child Health Society has been making a study of balanced nourishment for the child from two to six years old. Between these years a baby develops fastidiously.

FRESH air, exercise, plenty of sleep, and a nutritious food—they are Nature's own weapons for fighting Life's battles. Do you know any more nourishing breakfast than a steaming bowl of Ralston's whole wheat porridge?

One-half to 1 cup of crisp, well-cooked bacon or an egg scrambled, boiled or poached. Never fried.

One to 2 small slices of sweetbreads, corn, toast, or dry bread. Whole wheat and Graham bread are best. Spread thinly with butter.

One cup of glass. In cold water, may be used for warm water for two-year-old child. Cocoa, properly made, may be given occasionally to older children. No tea or coffee.

At least 8 ounces or 1 pint of milk should be taken at breakfast. Give morning lunches to children with milk, as physicians so advise. Children over three years of age and those with poor appetites often eat other meals better if they have no morning lunches.

NAB CONVICT IN WATERFORD HOUSE BREAK

One hour after the home of William J. Fitzgerald, No. 3 Cooper street, in the Greenwood section of Waterford, was robbed early today, police captured William Johnson, paroled from State prison, who confessed to the crime, officials declared.

A cold watch, on which Fitzgerald's name was engraved, was found in Johnson's possession, and in Malden court he was held with out bail for the grand jury on charges of burglary, and carrying and receiving stolen goods.

Officers McDonald and Hayes set out to search for the burglar. On Main street near Waterford square, they came upon Johnson, who had first denied knowledge of the break. When the watch was found, however, he confessed, the police say.

According to the State Parole Board, Johnson was committed to State prison in 1918 for burglary and receiving and carrying stolen goods. He had been paroled in 1923, but he was paroled in 1924.

O'BRIEN TAKES RAP AT POLITICAL GRAFTERS
Arresting the political grafters as more dangerous than the violent criminals, District Attorney Thomas C. O'Brien, in an address before a meeting of the Federation of Churches at Old South Church today, promised that while in office he would fight, with all the force at his command, against the criminal class, Mr. O'Brien said, "Much of the success of the violent criminal is due, Mr. O'Brien said, to the failure of the people to pay the price necessary to bust him. "Get the appropriation to employ enough police or to buy weapons and cars that will cope with those of the criminal is like pulling teeth," he said. He praised the co-operation of Boston police and pointed out that Boston has one of the lowest murder rates in the entire country.

Von Tirpitz Bares Inside Story of Torpedoing of Liner Lusitania

Naval Chief Says Kaiser Took News of the Sinking Better Than Had Been Expected

He thought it necessary to wait for a counter measure on our part before undertaking a step which might cause us to be regarded as the aggressor. It was one of the Italian ships should sink.

I repeat that a great many neutral states would greet with secret joy a counter measure on our part against England's brutalization of neutral trade. The Scandinavian states had protested, but they did not dare to act against Germany.

There was no fear at present that the United States would declare war as a result of submarine warfare.

WANTED TO WAIT
On February 4, 1915, Germany began submarine warfare against Great Britain.

In those days I held the following view: The start of the submarine war is premature and badly timed. However, since once our declaration has gone out into the world there remains nothing for us to do but to stand by it firmly and make it effective. Our standpoint must be: Neutral ships are warned and enter the war zone at their own risk.

In the meantime the Kaiser had ordered greater care in discriminating between Allied and neutral ships. Tirpitz held that this was a great danger for the U-boats, especially in view of the alleged misuse of neutral flags by England.

Letter from Captain Hornemann to Vice Admiral Lohmann, beginning of April, 1915.
"You asked me about my opinion of the Americans. I never felt that they—at least the influential circles—were sincere toward us. I have made the acquaintance of many prominent men; they were people with whom one associated but for whom one feels no friendliness. Their relations with the English were quite different. In fact, they would for quite a bit find them the object of friendship as they conceived it."

"And Wilson? The day he was elected the British Ambassador, James Bryce sat in the Metropolitan Club and eagerly scanned the incoming telegrams. When the news of Wilson's election came he heaved a sigh of relief."

Letter from Berlin to Tirpitz, Hamburg, April 16, 1915.
"Strange to say, even I am considered in high circles, say by Vice Admiral."

Von Tirpitz Sheds Light on the Lusitania

Letter from Chief of Naval Cabinet to Grand Admiral Althoff von Tirpitz.
"The Lusitania case. His Majesty took it very calmly, although otherwise there were manifold expressions of shock over the 'horror.' His Majesty's view agrees with your viewpoint as telegraphed."

Von Tirpitz's explanation of the sinking of the Lusitania on May 7, 1915, the submarine U-20 sank with a single torpedo shot the big English liner Lusitania, which had unexpectedly come within her range. The unusually heavy loss of lives was due solely to the cargo of munitions, the bad construction of the ship, and the faulty rescue work.

Von Tirpitz to Chief of the Naval Cabinet.
"May 9, 1915, 12:30 p. m."
"My opinion there is now urgent necessity to remain firm against neutrals, especially America, and maintain legal standpoint that Lusitania was armed auxiliary cruiser and carried munitions. Meeting half way endangers our position infinitely more than staying vigorously to our standpoint."

Marginal note of the former Kaiser on letter of resignation submitted by Von Tirpitz.
"Not at such a moment—that is a felony. He says and has to obey. Not stay and obey?"

FORESAW WAR
"In this long time I have—I may avail myself of this bold comparison—taken one trench after another from the English and have at last taken the last one at sea. I could find the means for it. Nor is it correct to say that I see now, with England, I have a war. I have a war that England would not force upon us in a surprise attack but that England would act as soon as we pointed upon France. England has always used allies to destroy her own chief competitor."

The chief of the Admiralty staff to the chief of the naval cabinet, Berlin, May 9, 1915.
"The chancellor demands a guarantee against the destruction of neutral ships by U-boats. In our note to the neutral governments we certainly declared that we could give no guarantee against confusion of neutral ships with enemy craft."

"In accordance with this it is impossible for me to give such a guarantee. A guarantee of the U-boat commanders beyond the present order is utterly impossible. It would completely nullify submarine warfare."

The chief of the naval cabinet to the chief of the admiralty staff, Berlin, May 10, 1915, 1:25 a. m.
"His Majesty wants that in consideration of the political situation, for the judgment of which the chancellor is competent, the sinking of the neutral be avoided in the immediate future. Better even let a hostile ship cut through than destroy a neutral."

LUSITANIA CASE
On May 7, 1915, the submarine U-20 sank with a single torpedo shot the big English liner Lusitania, which had unexpectedly come within her range. The unusually heavy loss of lives was due solely to the cargo of munitions, the bad construction of the ship, and the faulty rescue service.

Telegram to the Chief of the Naval Cabinet at Great Army Headquarters.
"May 9, 1915, 12:30 p. m."
"You Excellency:
"The Lusitania case. His Majesty took it very calmly, although otherwise there were manifold expressions of shock over the 'horror.' His Majesty's view agrees with your viewpoint as telegraphed."

Report of Captain Hornemann to Vice Admiral Lohmann, Hamburg, April 16, 1915.
"Lieut-Colonel Herwarth Bittenfeld told me the following:
1. The American military attaché called on him today and spoke about our answer to the American note regarding the Lusitania.
The attaché believes that our note will make a favorable impression in America. He thinks, however, that we should have a still better effect if we had taken better account of the peculiarity of the American character. He says the American is, first of all, a figure."

Also words do not have the effect upon him that sober figures have.

"Your note should have said: 'Lusitania was taking 100,000 grenades to England; according to our experiences hitherto 100,000 grenades cost us 100,000 men. As against this, the loss of a thousand passengers who voluntarily and in spite of warning entered the danger, cost me less.'"

Herwarth says that lately, even after the sinking of the Lusitania, the feeling in America had changed in favor of us, while the feeling in Germany had in the same measure changed against America.

WOMAN'S BODY IN AUTO WITHOUT ITS COFFIN

When a garage manager in New York city found the body of Mrs. James Burke of Whitman today in an automobile the police scented a murder.

Albert Douy, who said he was a Whitman undertaker, then walked into the garage and found himself the center of excitement. He explained that he was taking the embalmment body of Mrs. Burke to Whitman for burial. She died October 12 in Ellensburg, Wash. Douy was taken before the W. J. H. H. Gifford, registrar of vital statistics, and told he probably would be served with a summons for violating the sanitary code in failing to get health department permission to transport the body.

There is an Albert S. Douy, president of a large funeral directors' establishment at Whitman. Also there was a Mrs. Agnes Burke, who lived in Whitman for several years but who moved away.

'PEACHES' SAYS 'BUNNY' LOVES PUBLICITY

By 'PEACHES' BROWNING

New York, Oct. 15.—Nothing humiliated me more than Daddy Browning's craving for publicity. I think I've mentioned that falling of his before. It's an over-powering obsession with it, and he'd go to any extreme to obtain it. Nothing is too delicate, too intimate with him. He sees everything with publicity eyes.

He wanted the newspaper men to know everything about us—what I wore, the color of my negligee, the price of the pajamas, how many eggs I had for breakfast, what I weighed—O, I could go on without a stop.

He does nothing, he goes nowhere, without first stopping to consider the publicity possibilities. It got so when he thought up something clever to say he'd start for the telephone to call up some newspaper man about it. It was too good for private consumption.

PUBLICITY RAIT.

As I've said before, the only way I could induce him to take me out to any place was to point out to him that we would be seen there and that there might be something in the newspapers the next day about it. And, of course, we were recognized there and again.

But don't get the idea that the publicity had to be favorable. As long as his name was in the papers he was satisfied. That's why I'm obliged to believe those articles of mine are actually making him happy—therefore keeping his name on the front page. I know him like a book.

Take the time he bought that really beautiful sable coat. I thought then in London it to please me, to show his great love for me. I know different now. When the tailor didn't prefer a solitary line on the cuff, should have seen the way Daddy carried on. He went into a terrific tantrum—like a child from whom a lollipop had been snatched. He was mean and moody all that day.

And that brings me to little Dorothy Sumner, his ward. You wouldn't think a child as young as that would connect Daddy Browning's disease but she has—she has PUBLICITY in the worst form. I thought it was cute the first time

Martha Lee's Homemaker's Contest

Question Number 4

Why cut holes in the top crust of pies?

Answer:

Name _____ Address _____

Cut on the dotted line

I heard her express interest in new accounts of her doings, but when she became aware of my intention of attracting attention I saw it in a different light. I just said I call it a disease.

LAUGHS AT EFFORTS.

I suppose people who read this will laugh at the absurdities to which Daddy Browning would resort for publicity, but all the time it was as if he were snubbing me to the heart.

There has been a lot of talk about why I married Mr. Browning and why Mr. Browning married me. The truth has not been told yet, but now is the time to tell it.

I thought when I married him that he loved me as much as I loved him. He was kind and attentive. He had winning ways. I thought he was my own Prince Charming—until I met him.

He did everything for me, just rushed me off my feet. He made violent vows of love. I came to love him dearly and I looked forward to the time when we could live happily together as man and wife.

But I wonder now if even then he loved me with the pure, uplifting love that makes a marriage a home.

Mr. Browning is a man who demands some sort of thrill. To him I was something to exhibit to the public—in any light at all so long as I could bring him publicity.

I wanted a home of my own and a baby. He didn't, it appears. (To Be Continued Tomorrow.)

'I WAS AFRAID!' SAYS 'PEACHES'

on Browning's "cruel and inhuman treatment and his conduct toward her, which rendered it unsafe, his proper and dangerous for her to be his wife."

Browning's action on Saturday was to be the prelude to a separation suit which he said he would file against his wife, Justice Moore, sitting in Probate court, appointed Francis Dole, an attorney of this city, as guardian of the girl, on Browning's application.

The marriage of the sixteen-year-old girl and her fifty-one-year-old husband has gone on the rocks of litigation six months after their wedding.

Browning, about the time of their marriage, talked of building his schoolmaster's bride a "palace" on Long Island and showered upon her fine clothes and entertainment in keeping with his role as the "Cinderella Man."

He continued receiving bills for frocks, linens and other clothing after the girl had left him.

Every woman is out for the Martha Lee Homemaker's Contest. Comment and enthusiasm flood in from all sides.

Remember, though every member of the Boston American Women's Club visited the Martha Lee Homemaker's Contest at the Boston Food Fair to say they were clipping coupons and answering the question.

If you haven't joined the race, start today. It's not too late, and the opportunity is too good to miss. Here's the coupon with the fourth question. It's the other three from the Boston Evening American office.

From a copy in any public library. ONE THOUSAND DOLLARS. One thousand dollars is to be given to the winner of the Martha Lee Homemaker's Contest. One thousand shining dollars.

Five hundred dollars is the winner of the first prize, one hundred and fifty dollars for the second prize. The third prize is $75, fourth $50 and fifth $25. Then come ten prizes of $10 each and twenty-five of $5. Forty prizes in all, and all it costs you to five minutes a day of time.

THE FOURTH QUESTION. Here's the fourth question. Why do you cut holes in the top crust of pies?

You've been picking holes in your pie crust for years. Now's the chance to turn those little holes into real money. If you know why you do it. And probably you do. Isn't the contest worth the effort? Answer the question easy? Don't you wish the next one would appear today. But it won't, so clip this one and fill in the answer and mail it safely away in the rest until the last question is published.

There are thirty-three questions in the entire contest set, with one printed each day for thirty-three publication days. The contest ends November 25. Don't miss in a single coupon until that day.

The contest will only consider one tire sets, and you are asked to hold on to them until after the last question has appeared, and then mail them all in to the Homemaker's Contest Judges, Boston Evening American, 100 N. O. Box 110, Boston, Mass.

WILL YOU HELP ALONG? The judges who will consider each one of the answers are usually well qualified for the task. Miss Ann Bradley, one of the judges, is the principal of Miss Farnsworth's school, and Mrs. Ida M. Hubbard, who will serve with her, is the president of the Housekeeper's League, and Martha Lee, a long member of the board, is the house-hold economist of the Boston Evening American.

This contest is open to every one, except the employees or families of employees of the Boston Evening American, and affiliated newspapers. So one is to be considered to take part, and there's room for all.

It is not necessary for a contestant to purchase the Boston Evening American. Trading in the coupons will do just as well.

FIRE ON THE HOMERIC SOON EXTINGUISHED

New York, Oct. 18 (A.P.)—A small fire on the White Star liner Homeric, which sailed from New York last Friday, was reported in a wireless message from her commander to the line here today. The blast started in an unoccupied cabin, but was soon extinguished by the crew. The damage, the message said, was confined to the cabin's interior and fittings.

Five Colleges Form New Grid Combine for 1928 Season

By BILL GRIMES
AFTER a year of negotiating, Harvard, Yale, Princeton, Dartmouth and Cornell have entered into an agreement to form a football combination which will be known as the Eastern Conference.

This Eastern Conference idea was started about two years ago, but at that time there was talk of an eight team organization including Columbia, Brown and the University of Pennsylvania.

Many conferences failed to bring out a decision in favor of the Eastern Conference because of the composition of the colleges. The University of Pennsylvania's navy was not looked upon with favor, nor was Brown's.

With Columbia, Brown and Cornell got together and everything was running smoothly, except that Harvard and Princeton were on the point of breaking relations. The breach between the Crimson and the Orange and Black threatened to split the boys.

EVERYTHING SET.
A week or so ago, Harvard and Princeton came to a peaceful settlement and everything is now set for the Eastern Conference. However, the Conference will not get underway until 1928. The postponement is due to Brown's contract with Dartmouth, which has another year to run. After 1927, Dartmouth and Brown will break, for it is the plan of the officials of the Eastern Conference that each team play three championship games each season.

BENGUOH ENTERS LISTS FOR POLITICAL OFFICE
New York, Oct. 18.—Benny Bengough, peppery young catcher of the New York Yankees, who was unable to take his place behind the plate in the World Series because of a broken arm, has entered the political lists at Niagara Falls, N. Y., where he lives when away from the Yankees fold. Benny is the Democratic candidate for the State Assembly from the Second District.

OHIO BACKS HAVE INDIAN SIGN ON COLUMBIA PASS
New York, Oct. 18.—Columbia is planning to guard more closely in the future a spot on the elevated line, close to the left side of the Van Ness Interlocking Station. Mary Karow and Freddie Grim, Ohio State students, were intercepted by police at about the same spot and both fined $5 each for passing without a pass.

GRANGE OWES HIS FAME TO HIGH SCHOOL COACHES

Chicago, Oct. 17.—Speaking of records Red Grange holds, one is that crop of 21 drop kicks for points after touchdowns made by Red when he was alternating at end and quarterback on the Wheaton high school team.

The next year the Wheaton coach conceived the brilliant idea that he could round Grange out into a ball carrier and consequently tried him at halfback. That coach is still putting himself on the back for the smart and deep thinking that brought the chance.

BIGGEST CROWD OF YEAR AT PENN STATE SATURDAY

State College, Pa., Oct. 15.—Penn State athletic authorities expect to have the largest crowd of the year on Saturday, when the Nittany Lions face Syracuse in the big Alumni Homecoming Day grid battle.

The capacity of New Beaver Field is about 25,000, this total having been reached last Fall when Notre Dame played the Lions.

Fuller Rules Favorite to Defeat Sheppard in Arena Bout

By JACK CONWAY
SAMMY FULLER of the North End and Johnny Sheppard, sturdy Woburn featherweight, are expected to furnish an exciting battle when they clash in a ten-round bout at a Suffolk A. A. show at the New Boston Arena tonight.

The contest should develop into a glorious struggle of youth. Fuller is only twenty, while Sheppard is but twenty-five. There will not be any crashing joints in there once the boys are in the ring.

Fuller will enter the ring a betting choice. The speculative gentlemen consider the dapper North End boy one of the most promising fighters in the well known universes. Sunny has many backers who contend he will be crowned Jack Conway as the next world's featherweight king. They are confident his brilliant boxing ability, backed up by speed, punch, courage and youth will carry him on a glorio victory wave to the championship.

Fuller's work in his last two starts has been most impressive. Almost knocked out Carl Tremaine in the first round of their contest at the Legion show at Brown Field. A terrific left hook, which did not travel more than six inches, crashed against the Cleveland veteran's jaw in the opening session. Carl hit the canvas and was thankful to take the count of nine.

A few minutes later Sunny was dropped by a half guard blow, but he came up fighting and won the decision.

Dr. Reed on Harm "You Said It, Marceline!" and Benefits of Dancing

By CHAS. A. L. REED, M. D.,
Former President of the American Medical Association.

W HETHER you are or are not a dancer you must be interested in an exercise that relates to your health.

There are certain dances—the "charismatic" for instance—that are not only graceful, but even strenuous, and it is significant as to the benefits they afford.

The trouble is, it is not the dancing itself, but the attitude of the dancer that counts. A person who dances with a stiff, forced, and artificial manner, and who is not in good health, will not derive the benefits that a person in good health, who dances with a free, easy, and graceful manner, will derive.

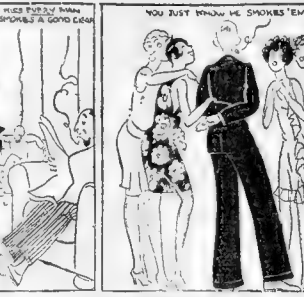

Here is a story of a young man, however, who was in poor health, but who, by dancing, became a champion dancer. He was a young man of about 20 years of age, and he was in poor health, but he was a champion dancer. He was a young man of about 20 years of age, and he was in poor health, but he was a champion dancer.

Older Girls' Example to the Younger Ones

ELINOR sat on the banister, watching her father's cigarette with fascinated gaze. Presently he pitched it away, and it fell among the vines that grew on the porch. Immediately a mischievous twinkle flashed Miss Elinor's eyes. Then, hesitatingly, she leaned over the side and picked up the cigarette. She held it in her hand, and she was about to light it, when she saw that her father was looking at her. She dropped the cigarette and ran to her room.

Treat Colds 2 Ways

With ONE Treatment

WHEN rubbed over throat and chest for all kinds of cold troubles Vicks VapoRub does two things at once:

(1) The ingredients are vaporized by the heat of the body and inhaled, thus relieving the inflamed air passages, loosening the phlegm and easing the difficult breathing.

(2) At the same time it warms and stimulates the skin like an old-fashioned poultice, "drawing out" the soreness and pain and thus aiding the vapors inhaled to break up the congestion.

THE THIMBLE THEATRE

MRS. SOLOMON SAYS:

THE CLAM ON THE TAMALE.
VERILY, my daughter, an indifferent husband is as low as the back, or a cold lemonade after a delirious ride. But, she possesses one of these, known not by her blessing, until she has tried life with an Ostrich, or, between a lump of profligate and a slumbering volcano, there is little choice.

Go in, a clamlike husband may be a crown piece upon his wife's cheek. But when she forgets the morning greeting, or falls asleep without the nightly caran, he is not filled with doubts and burning suspicions. Nay, his tender feelings are all banished.

He may cover her with newspaper, while she seeks to breathe life with poetry and love. But he is not curious concerning the mail while her pink and his fingers lift not to open her letters.

Her scintillating small talk may be in his ears as the drone of a vacuum-cleaner. But he is not filled with beautiful misgivings when the butchery sunniness her upon the telephone, and does not "listen," when she blathers with the hand-some lunatic over the wire.

Bobbie and His Pa

By William F. Kirk

LEARNED a new word in school today. Pro-pector, it means a man who looks for gold, was he finds it he isn't a Pro-pector or, more, is a Plate-ent, it means the same like a Bill-ent, it was telling my Pa and Ma about the new word & Pa and Ma, about that something one of my younger days in Nome & Sagerway, and Pa, it was a Pro-pector in those days, and Pa, it is useless for me to say I was a good one.

To be sure, to be sure, and Ma, whatever you did you did with wonderful skill, and Ma, of course, you indeed, and Pa, I shall never forget, and Pa, one winter up there in the frozen North I found a gold mine that was beyond my wildest dreams, and Pa, it must have been some gold mine, and Ma, it was not.

It was not Pa, Thomas & Thomas of wife & aldering Nigars, I like here & there a everywhere, and Pa, I was about to sell the mine for a million bucks, and Pa, now I say a poor, hungry little boy school teacher, and Pa, who had been up there looking for a gold mine for three years without finding any, and Pa, The girls had within me was moved to pity, and Pa, it was a girl that mine to that little.

How romantic, and Ma, Wipe-dout you marry her like they do now & then in the story? and Ma, I think she wanted me to propose, and Pa, but I was a wild devil in those days & a hoan word have been a case for me, and Pa.

Young Inconsiderate

By L. Lamar Matthews

FROM the day that Nita was born her mother and father bowed down and served her, she was the most important person in the world in their estimation. And so she grew up in an atmosphere of devotion that bordered on idolatry. Furthermore, she accepted the homage of her misbegotten parents as her just due. Time passed and Nita was all adults, and Nita just let it go at that.

Nita is a beautiful and brilliant young woman now and she has many good qualities. But consideration for other people is not one of them. It never occurs to her that her mother, father or anyone else in the household deserves any consideration whatever, she considers home in the middle of the night, switches on light, humbly.

Time, rummages in the boxes, and if it suits her fancy she sits and reads a while, regardless of the fact that she is keeping her mother awake.

In short, Nita goes as though the rest of the family had been arranged as a sort of background and service league for her personal benefit.

And is Nita happy? Certainly not. That sort of spirit never allowed anybody to be happy. She couldn't be happy with selfishness and egotism, because her father, in another branch of that family tree, had been a miser.

And her mother, under the error of Nita's upbringing, had decided that her little girl would have a different point of view. That is why Margaret is required to perform certain definite household duties every day. It is her reward.

Task to bring her father's house slippers when he comes home and to see that his evening paper is placed on the table adjoining his favorite chair. It is understood that when mother comes home from a shopping trip, Margaret will make her a cup of tea or otherwise make her comfortable.

And when mother has a headache is Margaret who assumes baby brother, answers the telephone and keeps mother from being disturbed.

Margaret is like other children and, of course, wants every comfort and pleasure that seems available. But her parents are making her understand that she doesn't have to have everything she fancies. Therefore, when she does have an outing or some small luxury, she appreciates it.

This utter lack of consideration for others is characteristic of the young people of today. They have been pampered and indulged and coddled in, until their ideas of themselves and others are all out of proportion. That spirit is not necessarily born in children.

It is the saddest thing in the world to cultivate and the hardest to eradicate. That state of mind does nobody any good, and harms everybody concerned—especially the spoiled one.
